

but, because of time, their fulfillment was left to his successor, or successors.

The pace he set in making speeches during the first term, an average of about three a week, Governor Tawes maintained during the last four years. In this second volume of his collected speeches and papers are many of the speeches he made on these and other topics.

—ODELL M. SMITH

Annapolis, Maryland
January 1, 1967