

1       this cup to pass from him.

2               I would suggest to you further that this is some-3 thing that cannot fail to take a great deal of judicial 4 attention. It is something that is going to divert the 5 judicial attention from the very demanding job of being 6 a judge and not a dispenser of jobs and not one who is 7 looking over and administering hiring and firing and 8 interviewing and doing all the things required in this 9 job.

10               As for control, in the limited control given 11 these commissioners, their every act would almost inevitably 12 come under the surveillance of the judges.

13               It is my feeling that we, by subjecting our 14 judges to the indignity of having to pick these men, would 15 be doing them the greatest disservice. I say to you that 16 in this area, particularly in this area, where the aver-
17 age citizen has his only contact with justice, and where 18 he sees law working as probably the only contact he ever 19 has with it, that casts any doubt in his mind that that 20 judge sitting on that Bench in those robes is dispensing 21 free justice -- I ask you for the love all of us have for
