The Maryland Humanities Council was formed in 1970 in response to the federal law creating the National Endowment for the Humanities (P.L. 89-209). It is a private, nonprofit Maryland corporation funded by the federal government, foundations, corporations, and individuals, and by a grant from the Division of Historical and Cultural Programs of the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development. The Governor appoints four to six of its twenty-one to twenty-six volunteer members. The Council reports regularly to the Governor.

The Council awards grants for humanities projects for the public to promote understanding and appreciation of the humanities in Maryland. The humanities include such subjects as history, languages, literature, jurisprudence, ethics, philosophy, archaeology, linguistics, comparative religion, cultural anthropology, history and criticism of the arts, and aspects of the social and natural sciences that use historical or philosophical approaches. The humanities are concerned chiefly with ideas, the meanings of languages, and values. These bodies of knowledge differ from quantitative or value-free aspects of the social and natural sciences and the creation or performance of the fine arts.

Brochures, grant information, and newsletters are available upon request.
