The origins of Coppin State College date back to 1900. In that year, the Baltimore City School Board initiated a one-year course for the training of black elementary school teachers at Douglass High School on Pennsylvania Avenue. In 1902, the program was expanded to a two-year Normal Department within the high school. The Department became a separate institution with its own principal in 1909. This facility for teacher training in 1926 was named the Coppin Normal School in honor of Fannie Jackson Coppin, an outstanding black pioneer in teacher education. In 1938, the School was renamed Coppin Teachers College with a four-year curriculum and authority to grant the Bachelor of Science degree. The College became Coppin State Teachers College at its present location in 1952 and was renamed Coppin State College in 1963 when the Board of Trustees decided to extend the institution's degree-granting authority beyond teacher education. In 1988, the College became part of the University of Maryland System (Chapter 246, Acts of 1988).

Coppin State College provides to over 3,200 students an academic program which includes Divisions of Arts and Sciences; Education; Nursing; Graduate Studies; and Continuing Education.
