

To you young women, happy graduates of this famed college, I offer in my own name, and on behalf of all gathered here today, sincere congratulations upon the successful completion of your college careers. As you have been a credit to National Park College, so will you be a credit, we know, to the Country whose free Constitution has made possible your educational career.

To you, and to the thousands of other graduates like you, America looks with supreme confidence. The future of this great Nation is in your hands.