

1 about that. Tom Pullen went down to Annapolis and stirred
2 around and the nuts and bolts of it is, of course, that 3 killed the bill and nobody would ever admit authorship of 4 the bill, which is another very interesting thing, although 5 it was stated from time to time that Dr. Flack had done it.
6 Now, why accuse Dr. Flack, I don't know, by anyway -- well,
7 there hasn't been any serious, so far as I know, assault
8 on this provision, if you want to call it that, or question-
9 ing of this provision since that time and I was wondering
10 whether or not in the deliberations of the Sobeloff
11 Commission this question came up and on the Wolff Committee
12 and whether or not any research was done, any judgments made?

13 MR. DONAHO: They tried at first to confine them-
14 selves, I think very wisely, at least after the discussions
15 were concerned, to that which they thought they could 16 accomplish, and I don't recall too much time or discussion
17 was spent on the mandatory school problem. The only thing 18 that bothered me about it, Jim Sensenbaugh just put his 19 finger on the fact that the legislature adopts the laws
20 which specify the formulas under which the school budget is 21 developed. So, from that standpoint, it is also true that
