

for their wealth of material and gracious cooperation, the Maryland Historical Society and Enoch Pratt Free Library of Baltimore, and the American Antiquarian Society of Worcester, Massachusetts.

These individuals have made the compilation of the narrative and bibliography much easier by their suggestions, criticisms and cooperation: Joseph Towne Wheeler, author of The Maryland Press, 1777-1790, Joseph L. Wheeler, librarian of the Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore; James W. Foster, librarian of the Maryland Historical Society of Baltimore, the late George C. Keidel of the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress, Lucile M. Morsch, head of the Descriptive Catalog Division of the Library of Congress, Mrs. Frank Schwartz and J. McC. Zimmerman of Hagerstown, Maryland. To them and all others - and there are several - who have aided in the construction of this essay, I extend my thanks.

Great care has been used in the compilation of this material, but there must be mistakes, both of omission and commission. Of course I assume all responsibility for them; and hope that, if this is ever used as a reference for any other study, the errors have fallen where they will not be picked up by others.
