

17, 1808, as "A new Periodical Work. This Day is published,—and for Sale at G. Keatinge's Book-store, The Embargo; or a leisure Hour's Amusement. To be published weekly, price 6 cents. No. 1 contains an affecting account of the extraordinary sufferings of Capt. Guirndinze and Family, a French Officer, who served in the Revolutionary War of America ... The editor, if mistaken [in his hopes of its success], will only meet the fate of moonshine and the spectacles, to terminate the literary existence of the Embargo."

No. 2 advertised in the Baltimore American, Apr. 27, 1808, as "Embargo No. 2, or Wit and News ... price 6 cents—containing Obadiah Williams's life—also account of execution of Wm. Morris, D. Dogherty, W. Robinson and C. Dogherty for the murder of George Workner."

No copy known. [920]

The Emerald. Nov. 3, 1810-Mar. 2, 1811. Baltimore, Published by B. Edes, corner of Market & South Sts.

18 nos. 21 cm. weekly.

Referred to in the Baltimore Repertory, v. 1, no. 1 (Jan. 1811), p. 5, as "the Emerald, with all the lustre and brightness which it may display, will probably sparkle in vain."

MdBP. [921]

The Evangelical Magazine. Jan.-June 1808. Baltimore.

192 p. 20 cm. monthly.

Caption title.

Jan.-Mar., Printed by J. Robinson; Apr.-June, Printed by John W. Butler.

MdH1. [922]

The Lounger's Cabinet, a periodical paper. Baltimore, Hunter & Robinson, 1810.

Advertised in the Baltimore Federal Republican, Jan. 18, 1810, as "Will be Published, On the First Saturday in February next, by Hunter & Robinson ... a periodical paper;" and in the same on Feb. 27, 1810, as "The title will be changed to that of My Pocket Book, And Belle Lettres Repository. The next number will shortly appear, after which it will be published regularly every Saturday morning."

No copy known. [923]