

Superseded by the Observer. Probably the item referred to in the Observer (Dec. 26, 1807), v. 2, p. 422, as "the panegyrists you [readers] possess in the Companion ... " The present tense ("possess") probably means that the readers "have in their possession" the Companion (and the three other dead or dying periodicals referred to) rather than that they still have the privilege of purchasing them.

DLC; MH (v.1); MWA; MdBP (v.2 imperfect); MdHi (2 copies); MiD (v.1); N (v.1); NPV (v.2); PHi (v.1, incomplete). [917]

The Critick. Baltimore, J. Robinson? 1807.

Price 12 1/2 cents.

Advertised in the Baltimore Federal Gazette, Nov. 4, 1807, as "This day is Published ... No. 5. Containing Remarks on the Theatre ... Observations on the Presidents Message ... Poetry. To be had No. 4, North Charles-street, Also of S. J. Jefferis ... and most of the other Booksellers."

Joseph Robinson was located at 4 N. Charles St. in 1807; perhaps he began printing the Critick just before he stopped printing the Observer. The final issue of the latter (Dec. 26, 1807), v. 2, p. 422, refers to the "panegyrists you [readers] possess in the Companion, the Critic ... "

No copy known.

[918]

Dull Times, or, the Histori-co, Poet-ico, Quizi-co, Politi-co, Literati-co, and all the other co-Motions, Whims, Fancies, Oddities and Opinions of Toby Gingham & Co. Baltimore, 1808.

Price 17 3/4 cents.

No. 1 advertised in the Baltimore American, Sept. 1, 1808, as "This day is published, for sale at Callender & Wills's, S. Barnes's ... & Cole & I. Bonsall's."

No. 2 advertised in the Baltimore Whig, Sept. 30, 1808, as "This day is published, and for sale ... But a few of the first number remain unsold; a second edition is, however in press, so that those who intend to purchase the whole series may have it complete."

No copy known.

[919]

The Embargo. Baltimore, G. Keatinge, 1808.

No. 1 advertised in the Baltimore Evening Post, Feb.