

offraudulently selling a spurious composition as and for the Four Herb Pills of the defendant, thereby injuring the good name, fame, and reputation of the said Wm. L. Simers. The court allowed the truth to be given in evidence; and upon the testimony of three of the most respectable physicians in N. York, the first part of the charge was satisfactorily proved. The charge of fraud not being so clearly made out, the jury returned a verdict against the defendant, and fined him five dollars. The examination of witnesses in this cause, and the pleasantry of the counsel on both sides, kept the court in such convulsions of laughter as were not restrained without difficulty. Even the gravity of the bench could not always be preserved.

Mr. Martin S. Wilkins assisted the public prosecutor; and Mr. Washington Morton, Mr. Robert Boquardus, and Mr. Silvanus Miller, were of counsel for the defendant; but nothing like argument was urged by any of them, the matter in discussion being of too contemptible a nature to be treated seriously. The counsel, therefore, exercised their talent at biting sarcasm and bitter irony against quack-doctors quack-med-cines, pills, powders, and Restorative Balsams.

NEW-CASTLE (Del.) Jan. 19.
On Tuesday last Governor Mitchell met both Houses of the Legislature and delivered the following speech, and then took the required oaths of office.

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives.

IN presenting myself before you agreeably to your notice, to take upon myself the duties of the chief magistrate of the state, I feel the importance of the trust and the great responsibility attached to the office. In discharging these duties, my most unremitting exertions shall not be wanting. And although I cannot promise myself I shall be entirely free from error, yet I can assure you, gentlemen, and all my fellow citizens, that according to the best of my humble abilities I shall endeavour to fulfil the great charge committed to me with diligence and fidelity. And whatever my failings may be, I hope a candid interpretation will be put upon them; and that they will be attributed to mistake or ignorance, rather than to a disregard to the welfare and happiness of our fellow citizens.

To perform the functions, enjoined by the constitution on the executive department; to cause the laws faithfully to be executed; to watch over the rights of the state, as they may relate to our sister states; and to co-operate with the general government, so as to produce harmony, and more and more to strengthen and confirm our union will require my most assiduous attention and your powerful aid. To the Legislature of the state, I shall look for assistance. As the immediate representatives of the people, clothed with their authority, I shall confidently expect of them that countenance and support, which their august station will enable them to afford.

In a free government, so happily constituted as our own, in which each individual citizen has a right to speak as he pleases so that he does not contravene the laws of the land, a difference in political sentiments is naturally to be expected. It is the price of our freedom, and the privilege of the citizen. But let not our differences arise to faction; and let us remember, in asserting our own rights, not to violate those of others. We are all members of the same family, possessing a common interest, and bound by the same ties.—Therefore, we would in our respective situations, promote those charities, which belong to men united for their common good; and regarding their country's prosperity, as the chief source of their felicity.

The principles upon which I shall act, are to be found in our constitution, in the constitution of this State and of the United States, and in our laws.—These several expressions, of the will of the people, contain every thing necessary to our security and liberty; and shall be the political creed, by which my conduct shall be regulated in the administration of the government.

I shall now proceed to take the oaths which the law requires; and should any communication be necessary before your adjournment, it shall be made by message.
NATHANIEL MITCHELL.

FREDERICK-TOWN, January 18.
It has not often occurred in the tour of our duty, that we have had to announce a more affecting incident than we do today in recording the death of Miss HENRIETTA TYLER, who departed this life on Monday, the 7th instant. She was the youngest daughter of SAMUEL TYLER, Esq. of Prince George's County, Maryland. After a violent and painful illness of four days, she yielded her breath (with a fortitude of mind uncommon for her age and unusual in her sex) with perfect resignation to that Great Being who gave it. She was on a visit to a sister about ten miles from home, when seized by the fatal disorder that terminated her existence before she could return. Conscious from the fierceness of the attack, that her end was approaching, she sent for her nearest friends, and bade them a final adieu. Her corpse was, on the Friday following, taken to her father's, attended by a numerous company of weeping relatives and friends, and deposited in the silent tomb in the family place of burial. About six months ago this young lady was in this town, on a visit to her friends; who, as well as all others that have had the pleasure of her acquaintance, must feel a deep regret at her early departure from the world. Whatsoever is modest in woman; whatsoever is amiable and virtuous in a female heart; whatsoever is admirable in the loveliness and bloom of youth, were conspicuous in the qualities that formed HENRIETTA'S character, which endeared her to an aged father, to her elder sisters, and her affectionate brothers; and rendered her the delight of a widely expanded circle of young friends. An admirer of her virtues prefaces to offer to her memory the following

ELEGIAC STANZAS
Gone is the Maid that whilom pleas'd the eye;
The Spirit that was wont to charm has fled.
For Henrietta heave the mournful sigh:
Who knew her living, must lament her dead.
O she was milder than a May-day morn!
'Twas in her speech—her words not idly vain:
Such modest Graces did her mind adorn,
She seem'd like one of Dian's chosen train.
Dead though she be, her soul will quickly rise,
And seek the mansions of eternal day—
Invited by some Angel of the Skies,
With, "Sister Spirit, haste and come away."
Let Death, grim Tyrant, triumph for his hour,
Like Winter, to whose short-liv'd reign 'tis giv'n
To kill each blade of grass and beautiful flower:
They rise again—and so will she in Heav'n.

DEATH, the dread monarch of shadows, has sacrificed this week another victim to his power. Mr. ANDREW SHRIVER, of the firm of JACOB and ANDREW SHRIVER, of this town, was cut off, in the fullness of life and in the midst of a flourishing mercantile business, on Wednesday morning last; leaving a widow, parent and friends inconsolable for his loss. [Republican Advocate.]

CHARLESTON, January 8.
Arrived at Savannah, the brig Rising States, captain Dixey, in 45 days from Cadiz, who informs, that the crop of grain had entirely failed throughout the kingdom, and that a sufficiency had not been made for the next season; that flour was 20 dollars per barrel, scarce, and rising. Captain D. also informs that it is the fixed determination of Spain, not to declare war against England, if she should loose her whole possessions and fleets.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1805.

Yesterday we visited the soup house, & with others, viewed with delight its salutary operations. While reflecting with pleasure on the comforts and ease which the poor will enjoy by this institution; it will be a gratification to the philanthropic citizens of Baltimore, to perceive that their warmest wishes and hopes are in a fair way of being realized, in relieving the "houseless child of want" from hunger, one of the most direful afflictions in the catalogue of human misery.—And it adds lustre to the character, which the citizens of Baltimore have ever sustained, and is particularly honorable to those gentlemen who so freely volunteered their services in the accomplishment of this important object.

The idea of a soup house was scoffed at, when first mention was made of it in the city of New York; but the citizens, as well as those who have subsisted upon their bounty, have long since felt its highly beneficial effects.

The citizens of Baltimore have never been last in adopting measures for the support of the poor, during the inclement season of the year; and we feel ineffable pleasure in stating that this year the plan of a "School of Industry," which we learn, will be connected with the above-mentioned institution, will certainly be put into operation and afford a permanent relief for those who are willing to work. The general character of our citizens authorizes us thus to state our opinion on this important subject. We know they will not suffer the indigent part of the community to want the necessaries of life, when they are willing to earn them. Nor will they suffer the orphan child to cling to the arms of its mother, rendering her heart with its cries for bread, when alas! she has none to give.—Can they view a forlorn family, who have already drank the bitter cup of misery to the very dregs, shivering over the last few dying embers, without a hope, when they have expired, of being able to replenish them? No! Forbid it humanity. Then let them come forward and evince their munificence by uniting their best efforts to adopt the plan of a "School of Industry," which has been several times laid before them and is the production of men who are no further interested in its execution than obeying the dictates of HUMANITY.

Domestic manufactures—Superfine cloths, of an excellent staple and workmanship, are at present selling at Boston, which were manufactured in Connecticut—the wool is procured from the Spanish Marino Sheep, imported into this country by Col. Humphreys, and is furnished to manufacturers of three different qualities, from full-blooded, half-blooded, and three-quarter blooded sheep, all of which thrive well beyond expectation in Connecticut, and will no doubt be introduced into other States. The cloth, which we have mentioned is superior to any ever manufactured on the continent. We congratulate the country on this new evidence of our progress towards independence of European nations. [Aurora.]

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in the island of St. Domingo to his friend in Charleston, dated the 4th December last.

"I left the city of St. Domingo eight days ago, I can therefore give, as you required, a correct account of the situation of that place. It continues to be well provisioned and supplied with all the warlike articles necessary; the population increases daily; from the influx of a number of persons who have arrived from all parts into the colony, after having experienced the inhospitality of the neighboring islands, where they underwent great hardships and misery.

"The general has received fifteen hundred thousand francs in bills drawn by the treasurer of France on himself in Paris, at sixty days sight. This paper is equal to gold or silver, and is subject to no kind of depreciation. A like sum is assured to him every six months for the service of the colony. This is a sufficient supply for the colony, as its local resources also assure abundance of all kinds of supplies.

"The brigands are incapable of succeeding in any attack or expedition they may make against the city. All their exploits hitherto, have only amounted to feeble excursions on the limits which divide the Spanish part from the French part of the island, to steal a few cattle. Without doubt, with the aid of the English, they might do more mischief; but the people of that nation whether it is owing to orders from their government, or to the general esteem which they all profess for general Ferrand, would at this day blush to be found giving the least assistance to cannibals—they ought to be equally shunned by all civilized people.

"The blockade which the English have from time to time pretended to enforce before the place, has never in the least tended to create a scarcity of provisions. Their views have chiefly tended to prevent the depredations of some of our state vessels and private cruisers on their trade."

On Monday last, the following circumstances took place in the New Barracks, Hallings; the Major of the 50th regiment has a large goat vicious in his nature, with whom the soldiers were in the habit of playing. A fine young man, servant to the Colonel, was teasing the animal for a considerable time, and was advised by many of his comrades to desist, but he would not; at length the enraged animal got the unfortunate young man against a wall and gore him so dreadfully that he died on being taken to the hospital. The animal's horn penetrated above the left eye, ran up the thigh and dividing the scrotum, passed into the abdomen, and tore out the bowels. The unfortunate sufferer was universally respected. He was only eighteen years of age, and was allowed to be the finest young man in the regiment. [London pap.]
