

Gentlemen of the Senate,

We again send you the bill entitled, a supplement to an act entitled, an act to incorporate a bank to be called by the name of the Farmers' bank of Somerset and Worcester, which a few days past was rejected by your body. On further consideration of this subject we still think the bill ought to pass. If in its effects it shall not be very salutary, it certainly cannot produce any mischief: it will not encrease the bank capital of the state; it is only placing a portion of it in a way to suit the convenience and advance the interests of upwards of one third of the inhabitants of the counties of Somerset and Worcester. If the present stockholders are willing to dispose of a part of their capital for the purpose of letting a considerable portion of their fellow citizens participate in its accommodation in a greater degree, without affecting in any way we can perceive, the public interest, we hope the senate will not prevent it, and that on reconsideration they will pass the bill.

By order,

UPTON S. REID, Clk.

Which was read.

The following message was read, agreed to, and with the bill sent to the house of delegates by the clerk.

BY THE SENATE, January 20, 1815.

Gentlemen of the House of Delegates,

The bill entitled, an act to provide for the better defence of the state, and prevent the necessity of frequent calls of the militia, which originated in your house, being a money bill, the constitution does not permit the senate to propose any amendment to it.
